INCREASING INCLUSIVITY FOR UNDOCUMENTED ASIAN PACIFIC ISLANDER (API) STUDENTS ON YOUR CAMPUS

Undocumented Asians and Pacific Islanders (undocuAPI) refer to immigrants from Asia and the Pacific Islands. Many Asian immigrants become undocumented as a result of overstaying their visas for temporary work, study, tourism, asylum, or some other form. Among undocuAPI, India and China accounted for the largest share, followed by Philippines and South Korea (see figure 1). Since 2000, undocuAPI make up the fastest-growing population of undocumented immigrants in the United States.

While institutional support for undocumented students in postsecondary institutions are increasing, undocuAPI students still feel unheard and underserved. These students point to a lack of culturally-relevant support, along with a lack of institutional knowledge of their community as the main contributing factors to their experience. UndocuAPI students make up 25% of the undocumented population in postsecondary institutions. If left unaddressed, this gap in service will only grow as the population grows.

This resource will serve as a template for educators to recognize undocuAPI presence, increase advocacy, and create safe spaces to provide support to this underseen community. These promising practices are relevant to Dream Resource Centers (DRCs)/Undocumented Student Programs (USPs), API student-serving programs, and other key student support programs.

Building community takes time, so you may not see the impact of these practices instantly. However, your continued efforts are building trust with undocuAPI students, normalizing diversity within the undocumented community, and overall improving the services you have to offer. Let’s work together to foster inclusive spaces for ALL undocumented students in higher education!

1. Learn about the complexities of the API community.
   - Examine your own assumptions about API students. Actively learn more about API students' experiences and unique needs.
   - Understand the impact that the Model Minority Myth has on undocuAPI students. This stereotype plays a large role in APIs not seeking or receiving support for their needs.
   - Break down the diversity within the API community. Consider differences in ethnic groups, language, socioeconomic status, religion, means of migration, etc. Keep in mind the intersectionalities that undocumented API students embody.

2. Uplift undocuAPI narratives and leaders to empower your undocuAPI students.
   - Uplift undocuAPI leaders and organizations on social media, presentations, and programs. This shifts the narrative to include the presence and contributions of undocuAPIs in the undocumented movement. UndocuAPI organizations around the country are UPLIFT in Los Angeles, ASPIRE in the San Francisco Bay Area, and RAISE in New York City.
   - Develop relationships with undocuAPI students to ensure they feel comfortable in continuing to utilize resources, services, and programs. Once a student feels safe, encourage conversations that explore their relationship to their status and develop their undocumented identity.
   - Empower undocuAPI students through mentorship, undocumented student or community organizations, and leadership development opportunities.
   - Hire undocuAPI professional and student staff in DRCs/USPs. Educators who share the same identity not only normalize the presence of undocuAPIs on your campus but also serve as examples for your students.

3. Create spaces in your DRC/USP that recognize and welcome undocuAPIs as part of the undocumented community.
   - Include images of undocuAPIs on your website, social media, promotional materials, and DRCs/USPs physical spaces. Diverse content allows visitors to recognize that the undocumented community is multicultural.
   - Participate in special occasions that celebrate the API community, such as API Heritage Month, Filipino American History Month, Diwali, Lunar New Year, Ramadan/Eid Al-Fitr, etc. Consider dedicating social media posts; adding posters or decorations to your space; and attending or collaborating on programs.
   - Invite undocuAPIs to be guest speakers for your programs. Do not limit them to participate in topics that only pertain to undocuAPIs. Normalize having a diversity of guest speakers for programs relevant to the undocumented student population.

4. Increase the accessibility of resources for undocuAPI immigrants.
   - Share resources that are translated into API languages, especially materials that can be shared with undocuAPI students' family members. Examples include United We Dream's Know Your Rights sheet and AB60 Drivers Licenses on the DMV website.
   - Promote API-specific resources from the local community. These resources can range from community centers, health centers, legal providers, and workers centers.
   - Find (or create!) scholarships that are undocu-friendly and open to non-Latinx undocumented students.
   - Disseminate DRC/USP materials in spaces that API students frequent. These can include resource centers, academic departments, welcome centers, and student unions.

5. Develop partnerships between DRC/USPs and API student organizations, API-serving programs, and the Asian American Studies department.
   - Cross-promote events between departments and student networks.
   - Provide training across departments about their respective population needs, resources, histories, and experiences.
   - Collaborate on projects and programs that explore the intersectionality of both populations. These can include research, publications, multimedia projects, workshops, programs, etc.

6. Dedicate a campus-wide effort to increasing your institutional capacity to support undocuAPI students.
   - Discuss intersectionality in UndocuAlly trainings. Acknowledge the diversity of the undocumented community including undocuAPI student experiences and specific challenges undocuAPIs face.
   - Develop a diverse Undocu-Student taskforce and include campus partners who identify as API and/or serve API students. Consider front-facing staff from departments like Financial Aid, Admissions, Career Services, Outreach & Recruitment, etc.
   - Ensure DRC/USPs participate in programs that target API students by key departments such as, Outreach & Recruitment, Associated Students, etc.

4 Asian Americans were labeled as “model minorities” in a 1960s TIME article, which wrongly attributed their socioeconomic mobility to their cultural values. The Asian American community has refuted this label as a “myth” created to divide communities of color.
